Safety is the top priority for public transit users. This app is intended to help pedestrians safely cross the street, by applying visual warnings and lights to match the incoming traffic signals. In addition, pedestrians are guided to the correct crossing point, avoiding the area where the flow of traffic is minimal. Similar to any self-driving car, this app needs access to the vehicle's on-board sensors to determine if the user is crossing the street in a safe manner. This app uses the vehicle's front-facing cameras to identify the color of the vehicle, using a combination of machine learning and image processing techniques. Once a colored vehicle is identified, the app considers the location and speeds of the vehicle, in order to determine if the user is on the crosswalk. If the user is in the correct location and speed, the app signals the user that he/she is allowed to cross the street, and this may include flashing the user's cellphone. After the user is cleared to cross, the app displays important safety tips and details about the crosswalk. This app may use GPS in order to identify which crosswalk is closest to the user's location. After a certain time, the app will recommend the user to re-cross the road. This app may also recommend that the user leave the crosswalk to prevent crossing in dangerously high-traffic areas. The app automatically saves the user's previous location and speed, in order to update the data for future crossings. The app also has two settings options, which allow the user to prevent the app from using the device's camera, as well as to enable the app's use of the device's GPS. Once activated, the app will use the camera or GPS in order to determine if the user is on the crosswalk, based on the user's current location and speed. However, the user can disable the feature anytime, to keep this app from using the device's camera or GPS, as well as other features. Description: The Windows 10 settings are accessible via a slider, allowing you to quickly zoom in/out of the screen. This app will help you quickly interact with the Windows 10 settings for easier access. But it's not limited to this, the program also displays other features like, the list of recently used apps, the user's documents, pictures, recent file/folder locations and recent files.
