Code of Ham radio ethics In the amateur radio service (amateur radio) the Code of Ham radio ethics represents a code of conduct for hams. The code is composed by the members of the American Radio Relay League (ARRL) which develops the code. A brief history The ARRL code was first implemented in 1927. The Code has undergone many changes and has been modified from time to time. As technology became more sophisticated, the needs of the amateur radio service have changed. The best documentation of these developments can be found on the ARRL web site. Relation to the FCC The Code of Ham radio ethics is not a rule adopted by the Federal Communications Commission. The FCC is the regulatory agency for the broadcast industry. Rules of the Code of Ham radio ethics The general rules are: You must be 18 years of age, You must be licensed by a recognized agency, You must not own any “Ham” antennas or materials, You must not operate on the airways (all Amateur Radio communications on the radio spectrum are governed by the rules of radio etiquette) You must obey all applicable laws. You must avoid outside influences that may cloud judgment and alter your conduct. You must follow the customs and traditions of the amateur radio service. You must abide by 55cdc1ed1c
